FUNERAL RITES FOR LATE MR. JOE WELCH

On Thursday morning last Blessed Sacrament (R.C.) church was crowded with sympathizers and friends, all gathered to pay their last respects to the late Mr. Joseph Welch, whose death was reported last week.

The solemn requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father J. P. Egan, P.P., assisted by a full choir of altar boys and a full choir, and at the conclusion of the mass, the priest spoke sympathizing to the bereaved mourners, and pointed out the splendid record which the deceased had left behind for others to live up to.

The arrangements were in the hands of Mr. Welch's family, and pall bearers were Messrs. W. Bibby, C. Stafford, G. Gehring, E. Heffernan, W. Knowles, and J. Robinson. Interment was made at Wainwright cemetery, with a large number following the cortege to the last rites there. In addition to representatives of the Town Council and Board of Trade all walks of life were represented in the congregation, and as a mark of respect the town stores were closed during the funeral service.

Among the floral tributes were those from: Sarah, Beale and Grace; Wainwright Board of Trade; The Mayor and Council; Town of Wainwright; The Officials and Staff Atlas Lumber Co., Calgary; Portage Mutual Ins. Co.; J. H. Robson; Mrs. J. Pawling; Sid and Wainwright Bibby; Mr. and Mrs. G. Steele; Margaret and Roger; Mr. and Mrs. J. Clifton and Helen; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. McCulloch.

Mass Cards were from: Rev. Father W. F. Bowen, Edmonton; Mrs. O'Callaghan and family; Rev. Father J. P. Egan, Paul Dupuy; Pupils of Blessed Sacrament School; Mr. and Mrs. Pilgrim and family; Mr. and Mrs. Stafford and family; Mr. and Mrs. J. Stiner and family.

Asks Canadians War Effort Be Truly "All Out"

Canadians generally do not regard the present war as their chief interest in life, according to a Toronto physician who recently was invalided back to Canada after serving one year overseas. The physician, Dr. Harris H. Gray, who was a major with the No. 15 General Hospital unit of the R.C.A.M.C., added that Canada's war consciousness was "extra" to regular peace-time pursuits and that Canada will not be able to go "all out" in its war effort until this attitude changes.

Major Gray declared he was amazed by the present complacency of so many Canadians.

"It was not the absence of air warnings and the blackouts that impressed me when I first returned home," he said. "It was the luxury that the people seemed to demand. I know that Canada is doing a lot to win this war, but they are not doing as much as the people over in England have been led to believe to expect."

"People in England have been hard hit—they're very much on the defensive. We hear that they can take it. They certainly need our help. They are holding off the enemy and waiting for assistance from us. How can we help them when we are thinking so much of our own personal petty likes and dislikes than we are of getting down to serious work? So many Canadians do not act as if they realize what is going on over there," he said.

Speaking of the people in England, Dr. Gray said that he was much impressed by the way older people are doing their war work. "The man who brought our daily papers was well over seventy. Some mornings he was late. He had been up all night fighting fires, but this he never thought worth mentioning. My one visit to Queen's Hall to hear the philharmonic orchestra showed them carrying on fine programs without the young and physically fit. Elderly people are putting up their cars so that they will not use a ration of petrol because it means risking the lives of sailors."

Those of the British Isles have only one interest in life, he said, and that consists of getting the business of this war over with, regardless of cost, regardless of hardship, regardless of privation.

"Over on this side of the Atlantic we are anxious and willing to commit ourselves to war work. But there seems to be no real general sacrifice, no real aim to fight this war as hard as we should fight it. This war should come first in all our thoughts and actions. If we are engaged in war industries, let us be engaged to the full. If we must continue with our businesses, let us do what we can to help. Buying War Savings Certificates is one way. But the way to plan your purchases of War Savings Certificates is not in the terms of what you can spare over and above the cost of something that you do not need. Forget about everything that is not essential and let our money win this war before it's too late," Dr. Gray pleaded.

A NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

This is simply an intimation to the public that the local Committee of the Red Cross proposes making a collection and having an Auction Sale on the afternoon of May 31st, in Wainwright. Any household goods or farm equipment or any salable article that might be kindly donated would be graciously received.

Fuller notices will be given. The suffering in the battle fields and in bombed out areas call to us for help. R. S. STEVENS.

Mothers' Day

"Woman is the mightiest power in the world, and it lies in her hand to lead man whither the Almighty God would have him go."

Winston Churchill, Britain's Premier

Winston Churchill is tough. The first important thing he does when he is awakened at 7:15 every morning is light a cigar. The only thing his mind tolerates and retains a whole library of facts—His body tolerates terrific burdens. He wears out whole squads of secretaries. He takes down platoons of men who have hidden and now lose him. He is 'so' unimpeachable, and he carries a cane not to support his 65-year old body, but to prod, strike and point with. He is persistent. The way he got the unwilling Lord Beaverbrook into his Cabinet was to call him up every two hours, day and night, for 36 hours. He knows no fear. During air raids he often rushes into the gardens of No. 10 with no protection but a "battle bowler." He loves life and liberty so much that he has nearly killed and thoroughly enslaved himself a hundred times over in the past six months. Dorothy Thompson calls him "the great life-affirming."

Britain's men of action are men to fear when the Union Jack gets tattered. Hitler fears Churchill, and implicitly admitted it when he made it clear in a speech at Sarbrücken that the inclusion of Winston Churchill in the Cabinet would be considered an act of hostility. So supreme was Britain then that the country's leaders, who also feared this thick man of blood, grasped at the Hitler threat as an excuse to keep Churchill down. Like the tragic Britain of which he is the mark, Churchill is eloquent. The measured sentences of Pitt, the roars of Samuel Jackson, the lips of Addison, the thunder of Milton, the heroic triviality of Kipling tremble in his sagging, pouting, one-sided mouth. He is ruthless in his larceny of others' vocabulary, but has a bottomless wit of his own. His reports of Parliament and the nation, which with Chamberlain were about as poetic as a brick wall, are often almost epic. Last month he spoke of Hitler and gave his people something real to fight for.

Winston Churchill represents the elite of Britain's past, the humble of her present. He is a Tory, an imperialist, and has been a strike-breaker and Red-baiter; and yet when he tours the gutted ruins of London, old women say: "God bless you, Winnie." Often he went among the poor to show them his interest. The pressure on him to order murderous but militarily wasteful retaliation on Berlin was tremendous, but he held himself back. On one of his tours the disposed shouted: "What about reparations? These were our homes. What about Berlin?" The Churchill jaw set grimly, the underlip went out, and the Prime Minister growled: "Don't worry, they'll get it back." Later one of his colleagues said: "Churchill is a very full-blooded gentleman. Hitler has often mentioned the shortsness of his patience, but Churchill's patience, as well as the British public's on this subject, now depends on a rapidly thinning thread."

For the time being, retaliatory horror had to be withheld. For the R.A.F. needed all its energies to pound German invasion bases. The equinox came, but not the enemy. One day, as a gale whipped across the Channel, and the sharp tongue of the Channel rip, and fog set thick about Dover, Winston Churchill turned the House over to the First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander. As the Prime Minister leaned busily over some notes, the First Lord announced that the destroyers bought from the United States would be given the names of towns which lie in both Britain and the United States, that the first flotilla would be given the initial C, and that the flotilla leader would be called Churchill. The Prime Minister busily leaned and fumbled, but the bold top of his head blushed. Cheering and happily laughing, M. P.'s shouted: "Hold your head up." Like a little boy caught out in pleasant mischief, Winston Churchill raised his pouting face to the Mother of Parliaments.

History Proves That All Despots Finally Disappear

People who used to "let George do it" now advocate leaving it to history. History, they argue, will take care of Hitlerism, as it took care of Napoleon and other conquerors and tyrants. Over the prospective centuries, the Alexanders do look like mere incidents in the great story of humanism—comments the Christian Science Monitor.

Thus the novelist, Kathleen Norris, preceding Colonel Lindbergh as speaker at the New York meeting of the America First Committee, could say:

"We are justified in feeling that, although a cruel and unbalanced dictator has arisen in Europe... this state of affairs will last no longer than it has lasted in the past, when Peter the Great, Louis XIV, Cromwell, Philip of Spain and Napoleon have caused them panic... We may hope that, within a few years, these despots will disappear."

The conquerors come and go, seemingly falling by their own weight, as they rose apparently by their own power. But they did neither. Their times helped to make them what they were, and active opponents contributed decisively to the undoing of conquerors' achievements.

Americans who are besieged in their moral civility by arguments encouraging passivity and apathy may well remember the history of their own nation's struggle for collective and individual freedom. History has brought these blessings to America. But what is history? It is primarily the record of courageous action.

History is not what man waits for. It is what they do. Subscribe to The Star.

Dance For Red Cross By Fraternity Funsters

Wednesday evening last saw a real merry time spent by a nice crowd when the "Fraternity Funsters" put on a dance in aid of the local Red Cross, with the Masonic Hall being the rendezvous.

The Wainwright orchestra—Mrs. Glass with Messrs. Kent, Ward and Schmitt—provided a full repertoire of numbers for the occasion and all had a real good time, with a worthwhile financial result for the object of the gathering.

Thanks to the local Legion boys, the hall was appropriately decorated with flags and bunting, and Comrades Wilson and Grant officiated at the door.

A number of "spot" dances saw some nice prizes awarded, and at midnight the Funsters served a sumptuous lunch, following which the dance was resumed till the early hours of the morning.

Annual Bull Sale At Lloydminster

Cattle breeders can select from 60 bulls, thirty-two Shorthorns and twenty-eight Herefords at the Lloydminster Bull Sale to be held on Tuesday, May 27th. All tested for tuberculosis. The judging starts at 10:30 a.m. and the sale at 1:30 p.m.

For 22 years the Exhibition Association has sponsored a sale and this year more bulls have been entered than ever before, making this one of the five biggest sales in the three Prairie Provinces.

You are invited to write G. M. Cook, Lloydminster, Manager of the Exhibition Association, for catalogue of the sale or any information.

BANK OF MONTREAL FIRST CROP REPORT

The Bank of Montreal's first telegraphic crop report of the season reports that generally across the Dominion the season is about two weeks earlier than usual, the exception being in the Prairie Provinces, where variable conditions have been obtained.

In Manitoba and Saskatchewan, though Spring land operations have begun, the general progress of seeding has been retarded by rains and low temperatures, whereas in Alberta, seeding is now well under way. Since April 1st, precipitation in Manitoba and Saskatchewan on the average has been above normal, but in Alberta the fall of rain and snow has been less than normal. Moisture conditions on the whole are sufficient to ensure germination of the seed. Reports received indicate a reduction in wheat acreage. Little soil drifting has occurred. In the Province of Quebec, although snow is still in evidence in a few areas in general, frost is cut of the ground and early operations are commencing. Pastures and orchards are in good condition and there is very little evidence of winter-kill. The run of maple sap, has been considerably below average. Moisture conditions are satisfactory, but warm rains are needed in some districts. In Ontario, operations on the land are from one to two weeks earlier than normal; seeding is well advanced in central and western Ontario and has commenced in most other sections.

Soil conditions are generally satisfactory but warm rains would be welcome. In the Maritime Provinces, little frost remains in the ground and work on the land has commenced in a few areas. In British Columbia, seeding and planting generally are well advanced and orchards are coming into full bloom.

In Alberta, wheat seeding is progressing rapidly under favorable conditions. Surface moisture is adequate for proper germination of seed, but in central and northern areas, subsoil reserves are below normal and good was partaken. Later the bride and groom left for Edmonton. They will reside in Fort Saskatchewan.

General rains would be beneficial. A preliminary survey indicates a fairly substantial reduction in wheat acreage.

A start has been made with Saskatchewan seeding, although operations in most districts are temporarily held up by weather. Present moisture supplies are sufficient to ensure germination and give the crops a good start.

Seeding has commenced in parts of the southern and central districts of Manitoba, but heavy falls of rain and snow have hampered spring land operations. Average precipitation since April 1st is substantially above normal and the seed bed is in good condition with adequate moisture for even germination.

RADIOS SHRINK IN SIZE

Radio scientists have again achieved the impossible. They have invented now, smaller radio tubes—a new, smaller "B" battery which packs maximum power in minimum size. The result is an entirely different type of small, personal radio which is so small, so light, that size and weight cease to be a problem. Canadian manufacturers are reporting an astonishing demand for these tiny sets.

WEDDING BELLS

COMPO—CHYNOWETH

A pretty wedding took place on May 5th at 4 o'clock at the Presbyterian church when Dr. Stevens united in marriage Hazel Gertrude Chynoweth, second daughter of Mr. M. Chynoweth and Francis Leo Compo of Fort Saskatchewan.

The bride, who entered on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Jack Chynoweth, was lovely in an afternoon dress of aquamarine with matching hat and white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Miss Helen Chynoweth, attired in dusty rose and white accessories, also chose pink roses in her corsage and attended her sister as bridesmaid. The groom was supported by the bride's brother, Mr. Stanley Chynoweth. The bride's mother was gown in queen's blue and wore a matching hat.

Following the ceremony the bridal party were received at the bride's home where a sumptuous luncheon

Prize Ring Melodrama At Theatre Week End

Based on a stage hit by Clifford Odets, the prize-ring melodrama "Golden Boy," a Columbia Picture feature, stars a new-comer—William Holden—in the title role.

It is a tender story of a brilliant boy whose dreams of becoming a great musician were shattered because he could fight too well, and is full of emotional conflict and romance.

Mr. Odet's stage play, as brought to the screen, takes an Italian boxer from his first fight to the rank of title contender. The tale is well told and the interest held to the finish; when the gangster influence is killed through the efforts of his girl friends.

The time is the present, and the setting of the story is the city of New York. It is at the Little Theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday this week end, with an afternoon matinee.

Snuff Him Out

War Services Fund Is Successful

The campaign of the Canadian War Services Fund has been an unqualified success, declared James Y. Murdoch, K.C., president of the permanent organization known as the Canadian War Services Fund today, commenting on the results of the drive now nearing completion.

An official announcement following a meeting of the directors revealed that provincial treasurers had reported total Dominion contributions of $6,307,961 up to the first of the week, with an estimated $225,000 still to come. Of this amount $4,007,370 has been paid in cash. The objective of the campaign was $5,395,000.

Mr. Murdoch also issued an appeal to provincial and district committees to "carry on" in the collection of pledges and to "prepare now" for next year's drive.

Mr. Murdoch's statement followed: "As we reported on the 22nd of April, the first united War Services appeal held in Canada was an unqualified success. The slogan appeal to the citizens of Canada was 'The boys rely on the folks back home' and truly the citizens of Canada have proven in a very definite and practical manner that 'Our Boys' can rely on them. Truly it must make 'the Boys' and all true Canadians proud to be 'Canadians' and what an inspiration the support and generosity of Canadians to their fighting men must prove to our bombed brothers and sisters of the British Isles. The money will not be wasted.

The Directors of the Canadian War Services Fund entered the campaign fully realizing the potential difficulties of bringing five or six organizations together in a joint appeal, and also realized fully the terrific handicap the Campaign Committees all across Canada faced in the shortness of time available and the limitations of weather conditions. Both these factors, however, had to be considered in the light of other National War efforts governed by our Federal Government and there was no alternative, having regard to the Nation's total needs.

"We are glad now to say that the spontaneous response of the public, both in time and effort given voluntarily by those who worked in the campaign, and in the spirit and actual result shown in the monetary report, proves beyond a doubt that the principle of a united campaign, and also the work of the War Services Organization, meet with the enthusiastic approval of the people of Canada.

"Now that the campaign is nearing completion, the Director of the Canadian War Services Fund wish to assure all those who supported this, the first, united national campaign, that we have the broadest interest in this country, as a part of the British Empire, in the forefront of all our deliberations and decisions.

"If our heart-felt thoughts were answered another War Services Appeal would not be necessary but we must 'keep up the good work'.

"We are assured by those who have been most active in this campaign that the next drive technically will be much less difficult for many reasons. Preparations will begin immediately for the laying of the groundwork necessary for next year's campaign. We hope that the Provincial and District committees throughout the country, who have done such excellent work, will consider themselves as more or less permanent officers. We look forward to arranging with them so that one of their appointees will take charge of the uncollected contributions in their District, and also that we may count on their cooperation in arranging for the drive next year if it is necessary.

My directors desire me not only to thank Major-General the Honourable A. D. McRae for his inspiring leadership and untiring efforts and all those who worked in the campaign but the Press of Canada—Daily and Weekly—for their patriotic and most helpful support. United we stand; united we shall succeed."

SEA POWER—HUB OF ALLIED CAUSE

Sea Power is the hub upon which the whole of the Allied cause revolves. The Germans realise this just as much as we do.

It is the main task of the Royal Navy to protect the seaborne trade without which we in Britain could neither exist nor continue the war. Much of our food comes from overseas; but our most important life-line is undoubtedly represented by the convoys of merchantmen travelling across the Atlantic with munitions, aircraft and raw materials from America.

The Army in the Middle East was largely transported there over the 13,000 mile route round the Cape of Good Hope, and under the protection of the Royal Navy. The triumphal advance of the army into Libya, the disastrous defeats inflicted upon the Italians, and the removal of the threatened invasion of Egypt, were largely attributable to British Sea Power. Sea Power also assisted the Greek successes in Albania, for otherwise Mussolini would have been able to send troops to the Aegean. Sea Power has also helped the Army's more recent successes in Eritrea, Italian Somaliland and Abyssinia.

It is wise always to remember that no troops can safely be sent abroad except under the protection of the Navy, and that the Royal Air Force, wherever it may be, operates on petrol carried by sea to its bases all over the world.

The task of the navy is not merely protective. Our warships are also used offensively wherever and whenever there is a chance for attack. Consider the recent raid on the Lofoten Island the long series of naval engagements, bombardments and operations in both basins of the Mediterranean, as well as in the Red Sea and off the coast of Somaliland.

There is no denying, however, that the safeguarding of our convoys across the Atlantic is our most important naval responsibility at the present time. Germany realises this, and the 2,000 miles of European coast in her occupation, from the North Cape to the Pyrenees, has provided her with many bases for the use of surface raiders, U-boats and aircraft. All the venom of her attack by these means, coupled with the extensive use of motor torpedo-boats and mines laid from aircraft, is now being concentrated upon our essential seaborne trade in the western approaches and round about the coasts of Britain.

LADIES LIKE MICE

Fancy mice in a wonderful variety of colors are being bred in England for export overseas. Black, white, chocolate, blue, or in broken colors, they can be trained to all sorts of interesting things.

Strange as it seems, ladies all over the world have especially taken to this hobby. They experiment with particular shades and combinations of colors that take their fancy, and even in wartime they can obtain their basic breeding stock, together with valuable advice on color heredity, from the English livestock organization.

A priest is examining candlesticks and other ornaments, including a tabernacle, salvaged after a recent raid in the London area. For some reason the bomb toll among churches and other religious buildings has been high.

Breeding experiments have also been carried out with birds and the Lion Head Goldfinches which were recently shipped to South Africa have aroused great interest there. No improvement is needed, however, to that charming songster, the English Nightingale, specimens of which have lately been sent to the United States.

In the last few years there has been an enormous fall in rabbit breeding, and the English have evolved very fine strains of the Angora, noted for its wool, and the Chinchilla Rex, Havana Rex and Ermine Rex, these being fur-bearing animals. They have a much denser fur than the natural varieties, and one recent shipment alone consisted of 2,000 head for a fur farm in California.

No doubt because of Britain's variable and uncertain climate, which makes for the survival of the fittest, the livestock shipped abroad from Britain quickly become acclimated to their surroundings.

WHAT ADVERTISING REALLY IS

—WHAT IT HAS DONE
—WHAT IT CAN DO NOW

1. Advertising makes possible better merchandise at lower prices, thus serving the consumer and through service to the consumer creating greater demands for advertised products.

2. Advertising helps the manufacturer get quicker distribution, more economically and more rapidly because it builds greater and more immediate product acceptance by jobbers, dealers and consumers.

3. Advertising is the quickest and most economical aid in the introduction of new products added to an established line and in the introduction of improved products.

4. With Advertising the manufacturer can be sure of almost immediate acceptance by consumers of a new or improved product.

5. Advertising creates greater stability of production and employment by helping level peaks and valleys of seasonal demand.

6. Advertising, in highly competitive industries, by creating greater consumer interest in a type of product, often creates more business for all manufacturers in the field.

7. Advertising is a most potent force in building better public relations.

8. Advertising, by building consumer recognition of a trade-mark or trade name often enables the manufacturer of a product that has become obsolete to build sales on another type of product which meets current consumer needs.

9. Advertising assures manufacturers better supplies of raw materials at good prices because advertisers are likely to offer a greater stability of demand.

10. Advertising helps assure the advertiser of getting the first opportunity to accept or reject patents, suggestions and other ideas for improvements in product or policy.

11. Advertising attracts to the advertiser the better type of employee.

12. Advertising, because it helps a manufacturer attract a better type of dealer and jobber, contributes to better collections and smaller credit losses.

13. Advertising helps the manufacturer in his financing.

14. Advertising, by placing the manufacturer prominently before the public, encourages better styling, improved products, better packaging and other evidences of an alert and aggressive production and merchandising policy.

15. Advertising gives the manufacturer his best protection against competition against inroads of competition.

16. Advertising helps the small manufacturer grow larger and is his best protection against competition from the larger manufacturers while he is growing.

17. Advertising helps the large manufacturer retain his position of leadership.

18. Advertising protects the advertiser against price competition of unadvertised brands.

19. Advertising fortifies every manufacturer against the rigors of depression conditions.

20. Advertising is excellent insurance for the trade-mark against infringement.

21. Advertising helps the manufacturer get the best type of jobber and dealer outlets.

22. Advertising contributes to better and more efficient sales management by attracting the best type of salesman, by giving the salesman a better proposition to sell, by helping the salesman conserve his time, because it has created wider and more intensive distribution, and by opening the buyers' doors that might otherwise be closed.

GARDEN SERVICE

Sometimes a garden must be planted in a hurry. Perhaps a man is hired to do the job in a single afternoon or so, and then an hour or two later he is back to get it under way. Naturally there is less pleasure in handling in this cold, businesslike manner as compared with daily putting around all Spring watching the picture unfold, but it can be done, and it will give wonderful results. For this special speed and purpose experts advise using a large portion of started plants. One Good Cultivation

The beds are thoroughly dug and cultivated, and perhaps given an application of well-rotted manure or commercial fertilizer. Then started plants like Petunias, Marigolds, Cosmos, Pinks, etc., for the middle and back of the beds, and Alyssum and Ageratum, Dwarf Marigolds, Zinnias and Petunias for the front. These are best set out towards the cool of the evening, as are all started plants, and watered thoroughly. About a week later the beds will need another thorough cultivation, and another one about ten days after that. From then on such a garden will pretty well take care of itself and should produce a lot of bloom, especially if the flowers are picked every day or two.

There is little excuse for weeds at any time and certainly not in time of war. These useless things really represent waste and carelessness. True, once they get shoulder high and tough they are difficult to handle and fire is about the only method. But with proper care and planning they will never be allowed to get such a start.

Much of the trouble traces to the fact that people try to attempt to garden or farm more land than they can properly handle. In the Spring when the sap is rising in the trees these people feel the age-old urge to get out and dig. They plan a huge garden; they have a couple of acres plowed up. By seedling time some of their enthusiasm has ebbed and perhaps only a corner of the plot is planted, the rest immediately goes back to nature, which means a solid mass of burdock, chlorey or witch.

It is unfortunate that the original urge to dig does not last a few weeks longer. If only it would see the plot through the first cultivation and thinning that would be almost sufficient, because weeds are not hard to control. A quickly drawn hand cultivator or a Dutch hoe will nip off the young sprouts like a lawn-mower mows grass. At the same time the soil is stirred and nearby flowers and vegetables are encouraged to grow. Given a start like this, and at most a couple more cultivations later on, the regular vegetables soon take charge of what might have been a disfiguring jungle and a menace to the neighborhood now becomes a source of pride as well as beautiful flowers and tender, crisp vegetables.

One of the commonest mistakes of the beginner is planting seeds too deeply. Authorities recommend as a general rule only sowing to a depth of four times the diameter of the seed. This means that things like peas and beans will be covered with about an inch of soil, but tiny seeds such as lettuce and poppies will be merely pressed in. With the very fine seeds old gardeners advise mixing with a little sand to permit thinner and more even sowing.

World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strang, Director, Research Department, Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

Last week, in this column, I argued that the present Canadian surplus of wheat had not been brought about, as many think, by an increase of wheat acreage by Canadian farmers, because, I showed, the statistics reveal that world population and the world's actual consumption of wheat has actually increased during the past twenty years to a greater extent than Canadian wheat acreage has expanded.

Why then, it might be asked, has a wheat surplus in Canada accumulated? For a very simple reason I find. It is that Canadian sales of wheat overseas have not kept pace with the world's increase in population, nor with the world's increasing consumption of wheat. Canadian sales instead have greatly decreased during the past twenty years.

Why, it might be asked, should Canadian sales of wheat have decreased, while the world was steadily consuming more wheat each year? Because mainly of another most simple but synthetic fact, that the governments of the world, including Canada, raised tariffs and put hindrances in the way of our customers' selling their own goods to us. So, therefore, goods being the only real money in the main that people have with which to buy things, as the importation of other peoples' goods into Canada declined, so have Canadian exports of wheat to these people in turn declined.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Unemployed France is negotiating for large quantities of U.S. wheat—Canadian exports of wheat and flour for March amounted to 21.4 million bushels, the highest March shipments since 1928—Late winter weather and war operations in the Balkans disrupt plans for increased seedling—Reports from Romania indicate a serious shortage of food.

Following factors have tended to lower price—The U.S. winter wheat crop continues to make progress under generally favorable conditions—Estimated wheat surplus for export, or carryover in 1941 for Argentina, Australia and Canada totals 955 million bushels, compared with 650 million last year—Exports of wheat and flour to the Orient have dropped off owing to a shortage of ocean tonnage.

CARE OF THE DAIRY COW AT FRESHENING

(Experimental Farms News)

Attention to the dairy cow at calving time is very important. Not only is this so in order to obtain a healthy vigorous calf, but also to influence the milk production of the cow during the ensuing lactation. An outline of the care that each cow in the Central Experimental Farm herd receives may

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

Dr. K. W. Neath, Director, Agricultural Department, North-West Long-Everton Association.

Will Soil Wear Out? The answer is definitely yes, unless present methods of crop production are altered.

Four years ago, the Department of Soils of the University of Alberta made a study of the nitrogen and organic matter content of cultivated soils and neighbouring virgin soil at 22 widely separated points in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In this study, the four major soil zones (black, dark brown, brown and gray) were all represented. It was found that, as a result of cultivation, the black soils had lost 18% of the original nitrogen and 21% of organic matter. The dark brown soils lost 22% of nitrogen and 36% of organic matter. The loss in brown soils amounted to 20% of the nitrogen and 37% of the organic matter. The gray soils, naturally less fertile than the others, were found to have lost 35% of the original nitrogen and 42% of the organic matter.

The above figures were obtained from analysis of the surface six inches of soil. In general, subsoil losses of nitrogen were slight, but organic matter losses considerable.

The authors state (Scientific Agriculture, Vol. 19) that "... it is clear that the straight grain and fallow system has not maintained the nitrogen ... or organic matter content of western Canada prairie soils."

Of interest to dairymen, says C. D. Mackenzie, Division of animal Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Each cow has a dry period for at least six weeks before freshening and during this time she is fed well. High quality legume roughage forms the basis of her winter ration, along with some meal mixture ordinarily fed to the milking herd. The amount of meal feed varies from 4 to 10 pounds daily according to her condition.

Ten days or two weeks before freshening a meal mixture, such as ground oats 2 parts, bran 2 parts, and linseed oilmeal 1 part, is fed. Care is taken to avoid constipating feeds. In addition, the cow is given some exercise daily, weather permitting. A few days before freshening the cow is placed in a clean, well bedded stall, free from draught, where she may be quiet and not bothered by other cattle. During calving she is not disturbed unless assistance is required and then this is given only by an experienced herdman or a veterinarian.

When the calf arrives it is taken away from the cow immediately, care being taken to ensure that it can breathe normally and that it is rubbed dry. The colostrum or first milk from the cow is given to the calf.

After calving, the cow is given a drink of lukewarm water. She is kept warm and comfortable and is allowed to rest quietly for twelve hours. Then she is given a warm bran mash. Two bran mashes on the second day and two on the third day. During this period a limited amount of good quality legume hay is fed.

A little milk is drawn from the udder three or four times a day for the first day or so, and if milk fever is expected the cow may not be milked dry until after the third day. The udder is watched for indications of inflammation and if this condition exists and persists, it may be relieved by frequent milking and rubbing with camphorated vasoline. On the fourth day she is given the meal mixture mentioned above until all inflammation and congestion have disappeared from the udder. Then the usual meal mixture fed to the milking herd may be given. Cows are usually started on four pounds daily and the quantity is gradually increased to the full production ration by about two or three weeks after calving.

CHOOSING FERTILIZER FOR THIS YEAR'S CROP

(Experimental Farms News)

Greater care than ever will need to be exercised this year in the choice of fertilizer for farm crops. The Canadian farmers' chief war job will be to increase the production of dairy products of all kinds; therefore, the wise farmer will plan this year's operations and purchase his supplies of fertilizers and other essentials with this end in view. He will also have to plan his work so that he can get along with a minimum of labor.

The required increased production of dairy products can be met in part by increasing the carrying capacity of pastures, increasing the quality of hay, and where possible, increasing the production of grain. The thrifty farmer will give greater attention to the preservation and use of barnyard manure and will consider fertilizer chiefly as a supplement to it. Experiments conducted at the Experimental station at Fredericton and on the New Brunswick Illustration Stations, says R. C. Parent, Supervisor Illustration Stations, indicate that commercial fertilizer is usually more effective when used in combination with barnyard manure. The conservation and careful utilization of barnyard manure, therefore, should be the first consideration in increasing production and in permanent improvement of the soil. The chief difficulty, however, is that there is usually not sufficient barn-

THE FUNCTIONS OF THE PRESS

Editorial No. 5

THE PRESS AND THE ADVERTISER

The relationship between the newspaper and its advertisers is as important to the newspaper as it is to the publisher. Newspapers are sometimes unfairly accused of being subservient to the advertisers who provide the revenue upon which the newspaper exists. This erroneous impression has been gathered because the average person knows that the newspaper must have advertising to exist, and therefore if he happens to be of a suspicious turn of mind he concludes that the advertiser must set the policy of the newspaper.

Not only is such a suggestion untrue, but it is unfair both to the newspaper and to the advertiser. Practically every publisher will tell you that few merchants ever attempt to dictate the policy of the newspaper. They may express opposition to some stated the newspaper has taken; but few would go so far as to threaten the newspaper with withdrawal of business, if that policy was not changed to conform with the wishes of the advertiser. The successful merchant is usually successful because he is an honorable man, and few would stoop to the level of threatening a newspaper because its publisher had different ideas on a given question than the advertiser.

The relationship between the advertiser and the newspaper is similar to that which exists between a merchant and his customer, only in this case the publisher is the merchant and the advertiser the customer. The advertiser purchases space in the newspaper because he has a story to tell the readers of the paper. He uses advertising as legitimate means of drawing custom to his store. If the newspaper continues to provide the service required and adequate returns for the investment, the merchant continues to advertise. When he feels he is not getting that value he ceases to advertise. That too is the relationship which exists between any other merchant and his customer. So long as the customer feels he is getting good value and service from the store, he continues to be a customer. When value and service cease he takes his trade elsewhere.

That, very simply, is the relationship between the publisher and the advertiser. Any suggestion that the policy of the newspaper is dictated by the advertiser is a slander on both newspaper and merchant. Best proof that the advertiser does not dictate policy is the fact that it would be almost impossible to find a group of merchants in any community whose ideas could be so identical that they could formulate the policy of any newspaper.

SPEED THEM HOME AGAIN!

Canada today has nearly 200,000 of her men in uniform. These men are fighting for Canada. They are not strangers to us. They are our own. They are our fathers, our sons, our brothers and our cousins; they belong to us and we to them.

War or no war, we would be thinking of them; their problems would be our problems as would our problems be theirs. Because of our love for them we would be happy to help them. But now it is war, and they are in the thick of it; it is up to us to help them all we can.

Our prayers are always with them; prayers that ask for nothing more than that they will be spared and returned to us as soon as possible. Prayers for their safety. So are guns and ships and planes. These guns and ships and planes are needed—our fathers, our sons, our brothers and our cousins need them badly. The speed with which they get them has everything to do with when they will return home to us. We want them back and if our giving them guns and ships and planes will do the trick, we are going to give them all they want.

So let's be personal about this war. Let's make it a family affair so that we can get our Canadian family together again. It's too bad that we cannot each build a plane in our attic and send it overseas. Plane construction requires skill; it requires materials. Individually, we possess neither the skill nor the materials. As a nation we possess everything.

Your government is asking you to invest five per cent of your current income in War Savings Certificates. It is a loan. Your government is asking for the use of your money so that your dad or your son or your brother or your cousin can do the job as he sees it and come home. Since loaning to the government all the money we can spare will help bring your family home, what are we waiting for?

The DIAL REVIEW

Hi-Yo Silver! The Lone Ranger rides again in support of law and order and decency through the wild west of yesterday. But don't forget that he rides at a different time—7:30 Mondays and Thursdays over CJCA. Whether you're young, or whether you're—shall we say "gettin' on"—if you like daring deeds and strong men, you'll find the Lone Ranger an exciting program.

Sunday is a fine day to relax and forget all the cares and worries of the week. At 3:00 o'clock next Sunday try this—draw your chair up where you can listen to the radio (it will of course be tuned to CJCA), change from shoes to slippers, and prepare to enjoy yourself. It's the Silver Theatre Summer Series, a musical show with all Canadian talent. We guarantee you a most pleasant half hour.

Have you heard the Woman in White yet? You should—it's a good show. It comes on at 7:30 every morning (except Saturday) and is one of the best series we've heard yet. Incidentally, Peggy Knudsen, who plays Betty Adams in the play is appearing nightly in a legitimate production of "Summer's Heat" at a Chicago Theatre.

With aviation as his hobby, Charles Correll, the "Andy" of the famous "Amos 'n' Andy" team, has demonstrated repeatedly that his flying technique is on a par with his radio standing. Correll, with radio engineer Gene Knapth as assistant navigator and general handy man, entered the Aviation Country Club aerial jaunt to Furnace Creek Inn, Death Valley, recently, flying his Stinson cabin plane. He won third prize in a close finish, only 20 seconds under the winner's time. You can hear "Amos 'n' Andy" over CJCA daily at 9:15 p.m.

There'll be no more sailing the briny deep for the Music Mads until the Pacific Ocean lives up—or down—to its name. The girls, who are featured by Bing Crosby on the Kraft Music Hall Thursdays over CJCA at 8:00 p.m. decided to rush the season and do a bit of sailing in a well turned out outfit on an adventure. Finally five sudden and and seafaring girls managed to sail their little ship back to Balboa not feeling at all musical, but—they saw the sea.

When little Evelynne Callen, who plays the part of "Wendy," Dr. McLean's six year old daughter, arrived at the studio for her first appearance in "John and Judy" (CJCA, Tuesdays 6:00 p.m.) also her first radio appearance, she had her lines memorized. When script changes were made, she was very upset because she didn't think she'd be able to learn new lines in time for the broadcast. When told she didn't have to learn them—just read them—it was a much happier little girl who murmured—"Say then, radio's easy, isn't it?"

The Chase and Sanborn branch office in Los Angeles took great pride in a letter they received from a patron two weeks or so ago. It said that the writer had been using the firm's coffee in his home for many years and hadn't missed one of those Sunday night shows since May, 1937. Now, it continued, the writer was opening a coffee shop at his own airport (Montebello, Calif.) and would like to use the coffee there, too. The beaming branch chief asked the writer's name and learned it was—Edgar Bergen!

Don't you find the new Carnation Contented Program with Percy Faith puts a lot of pleasure into "Blue Monday"? We do, and we're still trying to figure out what we did with our Monday evenings before the program started. It's a lovely, lovely half hour.

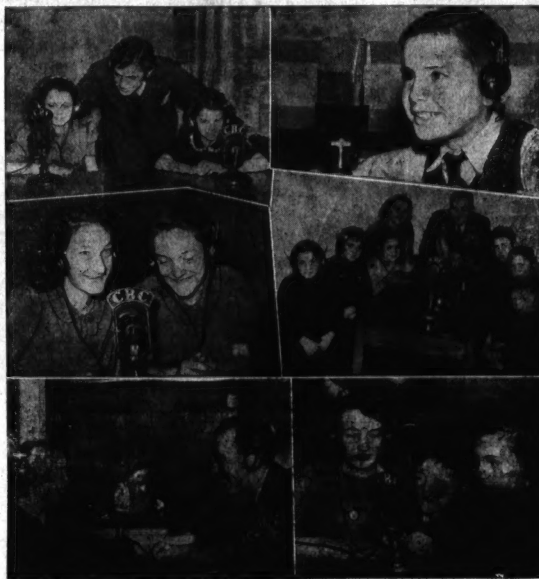

See you again next week.

WORLD'S WEEK

BY HAROLD L. WEIR

Associate Editor of the "Edmonton Bulletin" and author of the daily column "From the News."

There are uneasy rattlings from every chancellery in Europe as the still free nations strive to adjust their foreign policies to the new situation created by Hitler's seizure of Greece.

A strong disposition is evinced by German agents to point out that British assistance to threatened nations is of little value else Greece would not have fallen.

There is a reaction to this campaign of sinister innuendo in Turkey where one of the principal newspapers attempted to assert, the other day, that Britain's aid to Greece was purely nominal and of small importance. Britain, said this Turkish journal should have poured a half million men into Greece.

It is only necessary to point out two facts in reply to this ridiculous assertion. The first is this:

What would have been the sense of putting half a million men into the Greek defense when the Germans could have brought two million against them? Why saddle a defeated Greece with such a colossal army of occupation whose capacity for destruction would have been infinitely greater than the force which now holds that country?

The second fact is this: If British assistance was insufficient, why were the Greeks themselves so thoroughly satisfied with it and why did they part from the British, with such high expressions of esteem?

The truth is that Turkey, terrified out of her wits by the German advance, is playing Hitler's game of endeavoring to lower British prestige in an attempt to save her own miserable skin.

If Britain did not send enough men to Greece, it should be noted that Turkey, Greece's neighbor and sworn friend, did not send any men at all.

All this indicates, of course, that Turkey is involved in a diplomatic swing towards the Axis. The price of her friendship is probably the Axis adoption of an alternative route into Iraq that will leave Turkey unmolested.

Spain, too, is showing signs of reluctant acquiescence in Axis demands. These changes in national policies are interesting, but unimportant. Both Turkey and Spain have demonstrated themselves before this to be allies whose assistance is more of a liability than an asset.

On the other hand, Russia's readjustment to the new situation—nation's slight shift towards the British position or, to put it more precisely, away from the Axis position. Stalin suddenly published an order forbidding the transit through Russia of any and all war materials. This will cause some embarrassment to Germany and Japan.

On the top of this order there broke out in Russian newspapers a chorus of defiant statements which said, in effect, that Russia alone was calm in the face of the European tempest and that she was prepared to meet any "external enemies."

Just who those enemies were, the Russian press did not define. But the gesture was taken as meaning that Stalin would stoutly resist any German attempt to seize all or any part of the Ukraine.

There was also an alternative interpretation of all these fine words. It was simply that Stalin was scared stiff and had instructed his journalists to whine loudly to keep his spirits up.

From Japan emanated a peace proposition utterly fantastic as to establish beyond all doubt the complete ignorance of German statesmen of the temper of the democracies.

Japan proposed that Germany should be ceded absolute political control of Europe while Japan should be recognized as the ruling spirit in Asia.

The North American continent, of course, would be left in the status quo. The authors of this amazing document suggested, with incomprehensible naivety, that Great Britain should move bag and baggage to Canada which would become, under this previous scheme, the centre of so much of the British Empire as the Axis graciously allowed to remain intact.

Tokyo thought so highly of this gem of statesmanship that Yosuke Matsushita inferred it would be a fine idea if he should trot over to Washington and get the whole thing signed up.

The United States brusquely declined to confer with Mr. Matsushita.

So outrageous ridiculous was this scheme that it left some doubt if the Axis propagandists of it were in their right minds.

Certainly these people have seriously misjudged us if they thought for one minute that we would even consider such juvenile nonsense.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that the path of Axis glory leads, not only to the grave, but only to the looney bin.

RED CROSS NOTES

Our branch is planning a "Community Auction Sale" to be held the end of May. When you are house-cleaning, ladies, will you please keep this in mind. Many articles, of all sorts, useless to you, may appeal to others and in this way you can help the Red Cross. Articles may be left in the Red Cross rooms or with members of the Executive.

Once again we appeal for help with the large quantity of sewing on hand. All this is for the bombed-out areas in England. Please do not let this opportunity of doing something for someone who is less fortunate than you are, pass by.

We acknowledge with thanks $40.00 from the Fraternity Funders, being proceeds of the dance. The hall, music, etc., was all donated. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Grant acted as doormen. Thank you.

Through the efforts of Miss Geneva Zajic, teacher of White Cloud school, a dance was held in the Gilt Edge hall and we received $13.45. Again we express our thanks.

The Editor:

Dear Sir—I see by the minutes of the meeting of the Wainwright S.D. (larger unit) that F. E. Dixon is named as a trustee.

I, and I believe lots more ratepayers, would like to know what authority F. E. Dixon has to sit on that Board?

After making enquiries, I hear that G. S. Baker has resigned and the Board appointed F. E. Dixon, writer.

The larger unit was forced on the people without a vote; and now trustees are appointed without a vote! What is it coming to?

Thanking you for publishing this letter.

OF THESE THREE LOVES

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

CHAPTER VII

Jon was called to Winnipeg. Gillian felt strangely relieved to know that he would be gone for a fortnight.

She met Killigrew one chilly night of early Autumn, by the shores of Rydal Water. They looked at each other in silence for a long time, for what seemed an eternity. Then he said, "I had to come, Gillian. I stayed away from you as long as I could."

"It's no use, Simon," she said. "You should not have come. I should not have let you see me."

"That you feel the same way?" "We'll have no more of 'should not's' Gillian. I love you. I think I must have loved you from the moment I saw you."

"Strange way you had of showing

Gillian, don't you realize this is your wedding we're talking about?"

"I know. I was—" "Don't mind me. The things you said didn't hurt me, Simon. What did hurt was that you were the one who said them."

"They were not true. Will you tell me what is true in the story of you and poor Jeffrey? You could set me right, Gillian."

She smiled queerly. "But that's just it. I couldn't set you right."

"You mean that there is truth—" "Not the kind of truth you speak of. What is there is buried with him. It can never be disinterred now—not even for this."

"Not even for our love?"

"I'm going to send you away, Simon," she said softly. "This time you are not to come back to me."

"And you will go ahead and marry Jonathan Hillyer?"

"Just as I planned to do."

"I love you, Gillian."

"That's what you think. It isn't really so. I tell you that there is nothing in my life that I need to be ashamed of. I can tell you that." She frowned in bewilderment. "But do you believe me?"

"Of course I believe you."

"Right now you do. For a while you would. Then you would remember the old stories, the old thoughts you had of me. And presently you'd begin to ask me with your eyes, to watch me and to speculate, and then you'd question me with words. You'd nag at me to tell you about Jeffrey and me. And I couldn't tell you—do you hear?"

"But it's not true—oh, I hate myself for asking you this—it's not true that I went to pieces because you threw him over!"

"He said, 'If you throw me over, Gillian, I won't go on living. I'll again, you and I, Gillian."

"If I could believe that it would be that way, I'd go with you tonight, Simon."

"Come with me, Gillian. Come with me!"

He shook her roughly in his arms and strained her close, close to him and buried his face in the golden thickness and fragrance of her hair. His lips were on hers. She clung to him when at last he let her go. "Now—now will you come?"

Gillian ran then, eluding him. She heard him call, "Gillian! Gillian!"

There was a note from him waiting for her in the morning when she came downstairs.

She pounced upon the note, yet she was afraid to open it. There must be no more between them. There could be no more. She carried the letter out into the fading garden, to the grape arbor that had been a childhood treat for her and Deborah. She had written from the Rydal Arms, last night—

"Gillian, darling Gillian: I have just returned from Rydal Water, from what I find it hard to realize was not a dream. Why did you leave me like that? Don't you know you never can escape me now? What seemed to stand between us does not matter now—nothing matters save this—I love you. Simon."

Slowly she read and reread it and folded it and returned it to its envelope. "You will not come back, Simon," she said. "We've known all that we will ever know of love. It has to be enough."

She longed now for Jon's return. To Anse, who was waiting for her at the breakfast table she said, "I'll be going up to the city tomorrow, Anse. I want to make a start on my trousseau and I'm going to make a whitewash job of it. There'll be no big church wedding, we'll do it quickly and simply."

"Hm, yes. Just a minor operation to be sure, having someone grafted on to you for life. Nothing to give a second thought to. Here we are, parson, hitch us up!" Gillian, don't you realize this is your wedding you're talking about?"

"Don't be morbid, Anse."

"Just why are you rushing things with Hillyer? I know. You can't fool me. There's something pushing you, something that you're afraid of. By gosh, it's young Killigrew! He's been after you, hasn't he?"

"I met him last night down by Rydal Water."

"He's in love with you. He came to tell you that, to try to dissuade you from going through with this idea of marrying Hillyer. And what he said shook you quite a bit. Now, you look here, young Gillian: you're not going to rush into a marriage with Hillyer just because you've got some crazy notion that love is something not to be trusted."

She shook her head. "It's not that, Anse. Not a question of trust. I think I could trust love well enough. There are other things."

"I'll say no more, Gillian."

Jon Hillyer telephoned Gillian to tell her that he had just landed at St. Hubert Aerodrome. "And am I glad to be back, and happy to hear your voice. Tell me, how are you? Is everything the same for you and me?"

"Yes, Jon." She prayed the telephone would take care of the undertone of doubt, of uncertainty in her voice. I haven't been doing much, waiting for your return. I had planned to go to the city tomorrow."

"Good. You'll come on the morning train?"

"Yes."

"I'll meet you at the station. I love you, Gillian."

Anse marched into the hall as she hung up. He had come from the library. "What is it, Anse?"

"I'm writing to Deborah. I thought perhaps you'd like to take her with you tomorrow."

Gillian jumped at the chance. Deborah would be a splendid shock-absorber, both in regard to Jon and—there was another prospect, another fear; she might meet Simon Killigrew. If she did meet him, she wanted others around her.

He looked over his shoulder before he went on with his letter:

"... and it seems to me, Deborah, that Gillian is quite blind to what she's doing. I think she is falling in love—with a young man named Simon Killigrew but she intends to go through with marrying Hillyer."

I want her happiness more than anything else. I know you will help me. Just how, I don't know, but it may be that you can throw her and Killigrew together when you are in Montreal. And mind you, absolute secrecy is the word. My love to you, Anselm Meads.

Jon was waiting for them at the station. He managed to hide any chagrin he might have felt at seeing Deborah.

Deborah was happy. Gillian, glad of her presence, let her talk all she wanted to, which was a great deal. "I think it's grand—you're going into the publishing business, Jon." "Are we going to see Simon's Printery?"

"We have a lot of shopping to do—"

Gillian's voice trailed off. "You must see the printery," Jon was quite agreeable. I can't go with you, I'm afraid. But I'll meet you here at five-thirty and we can have dinner together and—well, we can see about tonight."

"Shall we go to Simon Killigrew's now?" Deborah asked innocently.

Gillian, wanting so much to go, wished still that she were at the other end of the earth.

Deborah turned into Beaver Hall Square with a great shrieking of tires. There was a brass plate with the sign, "Simon's Printery," by the door of an ancient house. Gillian followed Deborah slowly up the steps and into a long hall.

Deborah was almost at the top, Gillian still at the bottom, when Simon Killigrew came in the front door. And she could hear Simon say, "Gillian! and notice the way he said it."

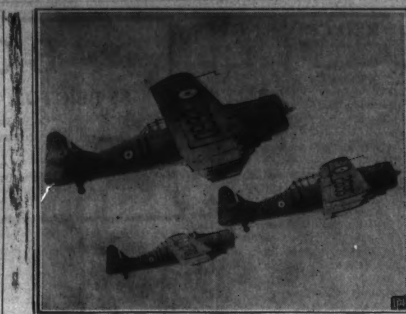

Gillian prayed he would say no more. He must know she was not alone. She said, "Deborah is with me, Simon. You've met Deborah?"

"We came to buy Gillian's trousseau," said Deb idly, looking at an earring but watching him from the corner of her eye.

"Yes," Simon's voice sounded hollow. "I suppose you want to look about."

"Yes, if you please," Deborah poked in her bag, said, "Oh, I want to go out to the car for a moment. You might start with Gillian, if you like. I'll soon catch up with you."

She went out. Simon stood for a

Britain's Export of Reading Material

Bomb and U-boats have failed to stop the flow of books, magazines and periodicals going overseas from Britain.

In the month of February the leading British firm of wholesalers, which handles about half the total trade dispatched to overseas customers about 85 tons of reading material, including 35,000 magazines and periodicals.

Britain's revenue from the sale of books, copyrights and so on, amounts to over £4,000,000 a year, and it is striking evidence of the demand for English works abroad and this represents nearly one-half of Britain's home trade of £10,000,000. Its value to Britain's war effort is shown by the fact that a book sold at, say, 7/6, costs only 3d. or so in imported raw materials.

About 75 per cent. of Britain's exports go to the East, especially India and Malaya; the rest is fairly evenly distributed throughout the rest of the world. All kinds of books, from technical treatises to the latest popular novels, are included.

Luxurious Informality On Great Lakes Cruises

One of Canada's most delightful holiday attractions is a Canadian Pacific Great Lakes Steamship cruise, an inland sea voyage from Port McNicoll through Georgian Bay, Lake Huron and Lake Superior to Port William.

It is an ocean voyage in miniature—the word "miniature" being used in a comparative sense only, because the trip is 542 miles one way, the ship is completely out of sight of land at times and shipboard life and all entertainment are patterned on ocean-cruise style.

Canadians and Americans in increasing numbers have found joy in Great Lakes cruises in recent years, spending their entire vacations on cruises or using the lake route as a link in a longer trip. Sailing and arrival times of the ships are planned to coincide with train times on the Canadian Pacific's transcontinental line. Or, reduced rates for carrying automobiles make the lake cruise a delightful interlude in a long motor tour.

The regular passenger ships, the Keweenaw and the Assiniboia, fine Clyde-built steamships with a gross tonnage of 3,880 and speed of 15 knots, have been outfitted especially for cruise service. They make 27 westbound and 27 eastbound trips in the summer months, westbound sailing, being on Saturdays and Wednesdays from Port McNicoll and eastbound sailings being on Saturdays and Tuesdays from Port William and Port Arthur. The round trip takes four days and a night. Half the lake route as a link in a longer either terminal and the Soo, affords a pleasant two-day holiday. Special boat trains are operated between Toronto and Port McNicoll.

Another carefree cruise of more than 1,000 miles in five days can be made on the S.S. Manitoula, 2,618-ton steel-constructed ship. The cruise is from Owen Sound to Port William and return, with calls at several interesting ports. The route is via the North Inside Channel of Manitoulin Island.

All three ships are equipped and staffed to make cruising easy and enjoyable. The cuisine is of a high standard, social entertainment includes dancing, moonlight parties and afternoon teas and ship sports include shuffle-board, deck quoits and other popular pastimes. Informality and luxury are found on every hand.

MODERN, EXPERIENCED BANKING SERVICE... the Outcome of 123 Years' Successful Operation

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

TRY NEW FLAVORS

Use your Favorite Recipe if you wish—but vary it by using a different flavoring.

Many of us get into cooking ruts with our pies, cakes, puddings and custards. We have a recipe that has proved satisfactory and we use this recipe without change—time after time. Often a change in the flavoring used, in the meringue, the frosting, the filling or in the actual ingredients will give us something entirely different yet equally delicious.

Take your favorite rennet-custard for example. This is economical and healthful. It calls for no eggs, no boiling and no baking. But perhaps you stuck closely to vanilla, raspberry or chocolate as a flavor. Why not try a recipe like one of the following and get a real dessert thrill?

Ginger Way

1 household rennet tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoonful vanilla
½ cup whipped cream
4 or 5 ginger snaps
Preserved ginger

Set out 4 or 5 dessert dishes. Break a ginger snap into each dessert dish.

Make rennet-custards according to directions in package. Pour at once over ginger snaps. Do not move until firm—about 10 minutes. Then chill in refrigerator. When ready to serve, top with whipped cream and a bit of grated preserved ginger.

Maple Delight

1 household rennet tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
1 pint milk
½ cup maple syrup
Set out four or five dessert dishes. Make rennet custards according to directions in package, using 3 tablespoons maple syrup in place of sugar and vanilla. Then chill in refrigerator. Before serving, top each dish of rennet-custard with a tablespoon of maple syrup.

QUICK-FROZEN FOODS MAKE WEEK-END MENUS EASY

Week ends are often a sort of busman's holiday for mother. Everybody is specially hungry and everybody expects extra good meals Saturday night and Sunday. There's the quite likely to be company. All this means extra work for mother.

But the chief cook can make the week end a real holiday if she plans the menus around quick-frozen foods. They are all ready to cook or serve just as they come from their cartons, for all the time-consuming work of cleaning and preparation was done before succulent garden vegetables, ripe, sweet fruit and delicately flavored sea foods were quick frozen. And all their fresh flavor and vitamins were sealed in by the quick freezing process, too.

They are thrifty treats, for all waste was eliminated before arctic cold was applied. Here are recipes for delicious dishes—that will bring credit to the hostess for her week-end menus.

Fish Nicoloso

2 packages quick-frozen fillet of flounder, thawed
Flour, salt, pepper, oil
½ cup butter
4 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons oil from anchovies
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Anchovy fillets

Separate fillets, roll in seasoned flour, and fry in small amount of cooking oil in heavy iron skillet, turning to brown both sides. Brown butter in skillet, add parsley, lemon juice, anchovy oil, and Worcestershire sauce. Place fish on hot platter, top with anchovy fillets, pour butter sauce over fish, and serve at once. Garnish with ripe olive slices, if desired. Serves 6 to 8.

Broccoli with Toasted Almonds

1 cup quick-frozen broccoli
1 cup boiling water, salted
¼ cup finely shredded blanched almonds
3 tablespoons butter
Drop frozen broccoli into briskly boiling salted water, bring again to a boil, and boil gently 5 to 8 minutes, or until stalks are just tender. Drain and season with salt and pepper. Saute almonds gently in butter until lightly browned. Sprinkle over broccoli and serve at once. Serves 4.

BAKING POWDER BISCUITS

2 cups sifted flour
4 tablespoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons quick wheat germ
2 tablespoons shortening
2/3 cup milk

Sift the flour, measure and re-sift with baking powder and salt. Add quick wheat germ to the sifted dry ingredients and cut in shortening. Add milk and mix just enough to combine all ingredients. Knead for 20 seconds on lightly floured board. Roll neat. Cut with floured biscuit cutter on floured board to ¼-inch thickness and place on greased baking sheet. Bake for 15 minutes in hot oven of 425 degrees F. Yield: 1 dozen medium-sized tea biscuits.

PEACH STONE SALAD

6 large peach halves, canned or fresh
Liquid honey
Lettuce
1 small package plain cream cheese
2 tablespoons tonik wheat germ
1/3 cup chopped dates
Mayonnaise

Dip peaches in liquid honey (honey may be omitted if desired). Drain and place on lettuce with cavity side up. Fill the cavity with a mixture of cream cheese, tonik wheat germ and chopped dates formed into a ball. Serve salad with mayonnaise. Yield: 6 servings.

Note.—A delicious luncheon or light supper combination is Peach Stone Salad made with tonik wheat germ, accompanied by fresh hot Baking Powder Biscuits, made with tonik wheat germ—and your favorite beverage.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

CURE THE RHEUMATIC INFECTIONS

The true prevalence of rheumatic infections is unknown because the majority is not, like scarlet fever, diphtheria, typhoid fever and other, reportable.

Rheumatic infection introduces us to heart disease which with the co-existent blood vessel disease leads all others in the list of public killers. Rheumatic fever ranks high among the most severe diseases; it is not so amenable to prevention as syphilis and tuberculosis. So far we lag in our efforts to control this crippling disease.

Begin in Schools

Our efforts in the control of rheumatism must begin in the schools. Examinations of children in schools has uncovered some appalling facts; 80 per cent of the total organic heart disease of school children has a rheumatic origin. This becomes an important problem when we consider that 3 out of every 100 children are suffering.

Rheumatic conditions seem to be more frequent among persons living in poor hygienic surroundings. The facts indicate that poverty, malnutrition and unhygienic surroundings are the most favorable for the development of rheumatic infections.

Growing Pains

Children in families living under the aforementioned conditions are apt to complain of "growing pains"; they fail to gain weight, have unexplained fever and may exhibit functional heart murmurs. The first attacks occur between the ages of 5 and 12, the peak coming at about 7. They are rare under 3 and uncommon after 40.

Recurring Attacks

A feature of rheumatism is its habit of recurrence; attacks are apt to be repeated with damaging results to the heart.

Old Theory

There is an old theory that cold and damp predispose the body to rheumatic fever. This is probably explained by the fact that there are more colds, grip and tonsillitis in cold and damp climates.

Prevention is the slogan in rheumatic fever. The child with growing pains, gripe, tonsillitis and sinus attacks should promptly be put to bed; he should remain in bed until well. Infected tonsils and other foci of infection should be removed. Children should be well fed, clothed and cared for. It will pay handsomely to check the onset and course of rheumatic fever.

WOOL WITHOUT "TICKLE"

British Textile Experts Solve An Old Problem

A wool fixing process which takes all the "tickle" out of garments made from it has been evolved by British textile experts.

People in countries with strongly contrasting day and night temperatures will therefore be able to wear woolen underwear with comfort during the day and yet have protection from chills after sundown.

These personalities of the entertainment world have come to Canada at their own expense to give their talent for the CBC's Theatre of Freedom series, heard Sundays at 7:00 p.m. MST. Lovely Anna Neagle is seen at top left at the reception in her honor in Toronto where she played the title role in "Victoria the Great." Top centre shows Mayor

BIRDS AND BOMBS IN LONDON TOWN

By B. Leslie Ennals

Not fear but defiance of the enemy is the spirit of our tenacious, courageous kin across the sea, whose in-born principles of freedom, toleration and justice, pride of race and love of country have found expression in true British fashion and tradition.

In a London square one morning a reporter, viewing the damage caused by a bomb before, observed two men intently at work on a plot. When asked what they were doing, one straightened his back and replied, "It's them confounded sparrows. We're fixing thread so as they won't shiver the grass we've just sown for spring." This incident typifies the spirit of a people who can't be scared or discouraged but, given the tools, will finish the job!

Launching a campaign to keep down the high cost of living, President Roosevelt made Leon Henderson, head of prices throughout the United States as head of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply.

NEWS & VIEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Sirius, of Jarro, on May 4th at the Wainwright Municipal Hospital, a boy.

For the purpose of acting as relief during the vacation periods, Mrs. Hornberger is back for work at her old job on the staff of the Bank of Montreal.

Following her trip to Duluth owing to an accident in which her father received injuries, Mrs. Jack Lewis has now returned home.

Thursday last saw Rev. and Mrs. Boas en route to their new pastorate at Gibbons. They motored west and their household effects left next day.

In order to report for his duties with the air force for which he was called last week Mr. Lorne Chrysler left for Toronto on Tuesday night.

Councillors Huntingford and Cork were in the city on town business on Tuesday to interview the highway commissioner regarding the work desired on Main street.

Mayor and Mrs. Middlemass were in the city last week and with their son Gilbert who is here on a short furlough.

Until further notice the manager of the theatre has decided to close down for the first half of the week; at least until Spring work is over.

The coffers of the treasury of the local O.E.S. chapter, were swollen nicely on Saturday last by the home cooking sale held in the dental parlors which received a fair patronage.

Gordie Graham reports several more Massey Harris tractors sold during the past week to our farmer friends.

Quite inadvertently the Star last week presented Mr. and Mrs. Everett Dick with a beautiful baby girl, whereas the new arrival was of the male persuasion!

The Misses E. Shaw, E. Wilkins, M. Coffield and O. Ford, chaperoned by Mrs. F. E. McLeod and Mrs. A. Anderson spent last week end in the city in attendance at the A.Y.P.A. conference held there.

Mrs. W. T. Wood, of Edmonton is the guest of Mrs. A. D. Richard for a short stay.

Sympathies are being offered to Mrs. W. E. Washburn upon the loss of her father, Mr. Thos. Moffatt, who passed away at Durham, Ont., on Thursday last at the age of 86 years. Mr. Moffatt was known to a large number in this district, he having been quite a frequent visitor here until a few years ago.

Gee. Reynolds held a successful sale of the effects at the former Evelyn Kemp home on Saturday last and a good crowd made bidding brisk.

The services at the United church on Sunday evening last were in charge of the Y. P. U. of that denomination.

Mrs. Frank Wright was visiting friends in town the last few days prior to her leaving for the coast.

Mr. Joe MacKenzie is sure busy these days holding schools of instruction for the persons who will act as enumerators at the forthcoming census in this riding.

Rev. A. Richard, is expected home from the East this week, and will conduct "Mother's Day" services in the United church. Special music is being offered by the choir for this occasion.

Don't drive without one, or even plan your car trip without getting fixed up with insurance from Carl Stieford at the Atlas yard. It is the cheapest and safest way to BE SURE—so IN-SURE!

Mr. Harvey Ward was transferred to Jasper and left Tuesday morning to commence duties there.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Trevartha and young son were here for several days during the past week before proceeding to Vancouver where Bob has secured a new position.

RAINFALL SHOWN TO BE BELOW NORMAL

According to the Searle Precipitation Report (No. 1, 1941) the wheat crop of the Prairie Provinces is now being seeded, and the harvest next fall will depend mainly upon the total amount of moisture available to the crop.

The moisture includes the rains which fell last fall, the rains which will occur during this growing season from April 1st until about August 1st, and in the case of seeded land which has been summerfallowed, the rains which fell last summer and the previous fall; that is the fall of 1939.

Snowfalls which occur between November 1st and April 1st, while helpful in filling up sloughs and making water available for human needs and last fall, in terms of the normal or average, in Alberta was 82 per cent, in Saskatchewan 77 per cent and in Manitoba 115 per cent.

For this present growing season from April 1st to April 28th, inclusive, the precipitation has been, in Alberta 42 per cent only of the normal.

Summerfallow, which will represent probably about 75 per cent of the land seeded, has now relatively a better moisture condition than stubble—although still somewhat less than normal—because the summerfallow has stored in it, as stated, additional moisture from the rains of last summer and of the fall of 1939. (These particular rainfall were normal.)

The W.A. of St. Thomas (Anglican) church are arranging to hold a bazaar and tea, and also a sale of home cooking on May 10th in the L.O.O.F. Hall. Save the date.

St. Joseph's Academy Music class will again give a recital in the Separate School Auditorium, Friday, May 16, at 8 p.m. Silver collection in aid of Red Cross.

COMING EVENTS

St. Joseph's Academy Music class will again give a recital in the Separate School Auditorium, Friday, May 16, at 8 p.m. Silver collection in aid of Red Cross.
